

Abstract of the Invention

Disclosed are methods for determining the quantity of leveler in an electroplating bath in the presence of other organic additives, such as accelerators, brighteners and suppressors. Such methods are fast, work over a broad concentration range of components and can be performed in real-time.

A copy of this document may be made and given to another person under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act or the Access to Information Act.